Dear Friends,

Despite the unprecedented challenges we have collectively faced in recent years, 2021 represented a special milestone for the Field Museum. We celebrated the centennial of our famous lakefront home with unique opportunities to engage with Field Museum history and collections. Over the last 100 years, our magnificent building has welcomed nearly 137 million visitors, housed an irreplaceable and ever-growing collection, and supported scientific research that connects all of us to the natural world and the human story.

2021 also saw the completion of our ambitious Because Earth campaign. With exceptional support from donors like you, we raised $316 million to sustain the Field's mission. Begun in 2015, Because Earth saw the creation of four centers of scientific excellence, the naming of key positions, major renovations of the public Museum (including new, permanent exhibitions), and healthy growth of the Museum's endowment.

This year, we welcomed two new curators: Sara Ruane, PhD who specializes in snakes and Foreman Bandama, PhD who studies African anthropology and archaeology. Despite the uncertainty of travel in conducting global field work, our community of 140 scientists reached new levels of scholarship. They explored the historic links between climate change and extinction using specimens in our collection, pursued conservation initiatives at home and abroad, and discovered several new species!

We believe each object in our collection has a story to tell, and each visitor can embark on a journey of discovery at the Field Museum thanks to your generosity. You have ensured the future of the Museum as a place of scientific research and public learning, thank you.

We are delighted to share stories of your Museum in this Annual Report to Donors, with gratitude for all you make possible at the Field.

Here's to a brilliant, new century of discovery in our lakefront home!

Sincerely,

W. Rockwell Wirtz
Chair, Board of Trustees
(2021-2024)

(On the cover) While red hair and fur comes from a pigment called pheomelanin, most birds acquire warm colors from molecules, called carotenoids, in the food they eat. As they metabolize berries, seeds, and other foods carrying carotenoids, pigment travels through the bloodstream and into their feathers.

Fossil tail feathers tell a new story of evolution

Scientists recently described a new fossil bird, Yuanchuavis kompsosoura, whose tail is nearly twice the length of its body. Named for a mythological Chinese bird, Yuanchuavis was a species of an extinct group of birds (pengornithid enantiornithines) that lived 120 million years ago in northeastern China. The general shape of its tail is called a pin-tail, consisting of a fan of short feathers and a central pair of elongate 'pins.' In Yuanchuavis, the short fan aids flight, while the elongate pin feathers provide ornamentation. Understanding how sexual selection may have shaped ancient birds like Yuanchuavis could help us better understand bird diversity today.

Paleontologists recently discovered that pigment containing organelles (called melanosomes) can fossilize. Melanosomes extracted from Yuanchuavis suggest its tail fan was gray and the pins were black.

Scientists discover a forest unaltered for 5,000 years

More and more studies are suggesting that much of the Amazon forest was altered before the arrival of Europeans. Plenty of areas in the Amazon that look like “wilderness” today show evidence of ancient forest-clearing, agriculture, plant domestication, and road building.

Scientists in the Keller Science Action Center collected soil samples on two recent inventories in Peru and sent them to colleagues who study soil charcoal and phytoliths, or fossilized plant tissue that give researchers a snapshot of what plants existed in an area. Instead of showing large-scale ancient impact, the rapid inventory soils tell a 5,000-year story of populated, but relatively undisturbed, forests.

In other words, the sites visited by the Field's conservation team were not massively altered by the people living there during pre-Columbian times. So, for 5,000 years, the forest looked very similar to how it looks today—showing evidence that the people who live there know how to make a good life from the forest's resources without impoverishing them.

Mystery plant from the Amazon declared a new species

In 1973, Field Museum Emeritus Robin Foster, PhD, stumbled on a strange tree in the Amazon rainforest that was unlike anything he'd ever seen. It was about 20 feet tall, with tiny orange fruit shaped like paper lanterns. He collected samples of the plant's leaves and fruit, but all the scientists he showed them to were not only unable to identify the plant as a species that had previously been described, but they couldn't even declare it a new species because the family it belonged to couldn't be determined. The mystery plant sat in the Field Museum's herbarium, for years, but Foster and his colleagues didn't forget about it. The team eventually received a grant from the Field Museum's Women's Board to study the plant. They analyzed the plant's DNA and discovered where it belongs in the taxonomy of trees, finally naming it Aenigmanu alvareziae, meaning "Mystery of Manu," after the park it came from in Peru.

Fish have been swallowing plastic since the 1950s

It takes centuries for plastic to break down, meaning nearly every piece of plastic ever made still exists in some form today. We've known for several years that large pieces of plastic, like grocery bags and six-pack rings, can harm wildlife. More recently scientists have discovered microscopic pieces of plastic in the water, soil, and even the atmosphere. To help provide historical context to this issue and learn how these microplastics have built up over the past century, Field Museum researchers examined the guts of freshwater fish preserved in the Museum's collections. They found that the amount of microplastics present in the fishes skyrocketed since the 1950s and continue to increase.

How can we use science to save the sharks?

Over the past several decades, sharks have become threatened by overfishing, pollution, and global warming. Conservationists have implemented important global plans for several species, including designated marine protected areas and captive breedings. For sharks, captive breeding is in its infancy, especially compared to other vertebrates. Kevin Feldheim, PhD, A. Watson Armour III Manager of the Pritzker Lab, worked with colleagues from several American aquariums to explore the possibility of artificial insemination as a viable option for breeding aquarium sharks. Their efforts successfully produced pups in all inseminated females except two cases where the female sharks gave birth by parthenogenesis—virgin birth. The success of this project is a breakthrough for shark conservation because it will allow genetic diversity to flourish amongst sharks in aquaria without causing unnecessary stress to individuals.

Earth's largest extinction event took longer on land

Earth's worst mass extinction event happened 252 million years ago in the Permian Period when massive volcanic eruptions caused catastrophic climate change. The vast majority of animal species went extinct, giving rise to the Age of the Dinosaurs. But, scientists are still trying to understand how the event affected life in the oceans versus life on land. Because of a more complete fossil record, scientists know that 85% of species in the oceans went extinct within 100,000 years. To learn about what happened on land, Postdoctoral Researcher Pia Viglietti, PhD, and MacArthur Curator of Paleomammalogy Ken Angielczyk, PhD, examined 588 fossils of land animals that lived before, during, and after the extinction event. They discovered that the Permian extinction took nearly 10 times longer on land than it did in the ocean.

Welcoming two new curators

Sara Ruane, PhD

Sara Ruane joined the Field Museum in September as Assistant Curator of Herpetology. Her research focuses on snake evolution and systematics. "I'm interested in what generates the diversity we see in snakes," she said. "Despite having no legs, snakes fill every ecological niche. They inspire fear and fascination in humans but their ecological impact can't be overstated." Previously, Dr. Ruane served as an Assistant Professor of Biology at Rutgers University.

Foreman Bandama, PhD

The Field Museum welcomed Foreman Bandama as Assistant Curator of African Anthropology in September. Dr. Bandama has broad experience, from excavating ancient African cities to laboratory analyses of pottery, glass beads and metals, but he says all his work is driven by a unifying goal to highlight African achievements. Before coming to Chicago, he taught at Sol Plaatje University in Kimberley (Northern Cape Province), South Africa. He received his doctorate from the University of Cape Town, where he also worked as a postdoctoral researcher.

Hidden colors reveal plant biodiversity

As forests and habitats shrink and climates change, it's critical we develop more efficient methods for identifying and mapping biodiversity. This is especially important for plants because they are one of several large groups (like fungi, insects, and microorganisms) for which we still have rough estimates of the total number of species worldwide.

While DNA analysis is the gold standard for identifying and understanding biodiversity, it can take weeks—sometimes months—to produce and analyze DNA sequences. Scientists at the Field Museum have been working on a method to identify plant species in the field based on the differences in light reflected off their leaves. Using a camera-like machine called a spectroradiometer, scientists can produce the data needed to identify plants in just two seconds with 99.7% accuracy. They also discovered that they can identify hybrids and populations within a species, which is very important for conservation.

Scientists double the number of spotted skunk species

Scientists know little about the smaller spotted cousins of the striped skunk, starting with how many kinds of them exist. Since the spotted skunks were first discovered in 1754, the number of recognized species has ranged from two to fourteen. Most scientists today agree that there are four species of spotted skunks. But in a new study, Field Museum scientists analyzed DNA from hundreds of specimens and found there are actually seven! The differences in DNA they found led the researchers to reclassify some of the skunks and resurrect several species names that hadn't been used in centuries.

Two new species of endangered screech owls discovered in the Brazilian rainforests

The South American rainforests rainforest is teeming with creatures unknown to science—including many nocturnal animals that have remained elusive to scientists. In a new paper in Zootaxa, Field Museum scientists and colleagues described two new species of screech owls that live in the Amazon and Atlantic forests, both of which are already critically endangered. The team analyzed 252 specimens, 83 tape recordings, and 49 genetic samples from across the range of the Tawny-bellied Screech Owl complex in South America. This analysis led them to describe two new species: the Xingu Screech Owl and the Alagoas Screech Owl.

The study illustrates how geographically diverse the Amazon and Atlantic forests are and highlights the need to protect more forests throughout these regions.

Archaeologists found that the societies with the most wealth inequality were also the ones that had governments that concentrated power with a smaller number of people.

Wealth inequality tied to despotic government

Throughout history and across continents, there has always been some degree of wealth inequality. In a new study in PLOS ONE, archaeologists examined the remains of houses in ancient Maya cities and compared them with other Mesoamerican societies. They found that the societies with the most wealth inequality were also the ones with governments that concentrated power in a smaller number of people.

The link between wealth inequality and autocracy isn't exclusive to the Classic Maya, the researchers note. "There's a tight interconnection between how power is funded and how power is wielded and monopolized," said Gary Fienman, PhD, MacArthur Curator of Mesoamerican, Central American, and East Asian Anthropology. "People can and do establish institutions that try to check power, but it takes interpersonal interdependence and the recognition that we cooperate with communities of people beyond just one's self and one's family."

Recovering a species feared to be extinct

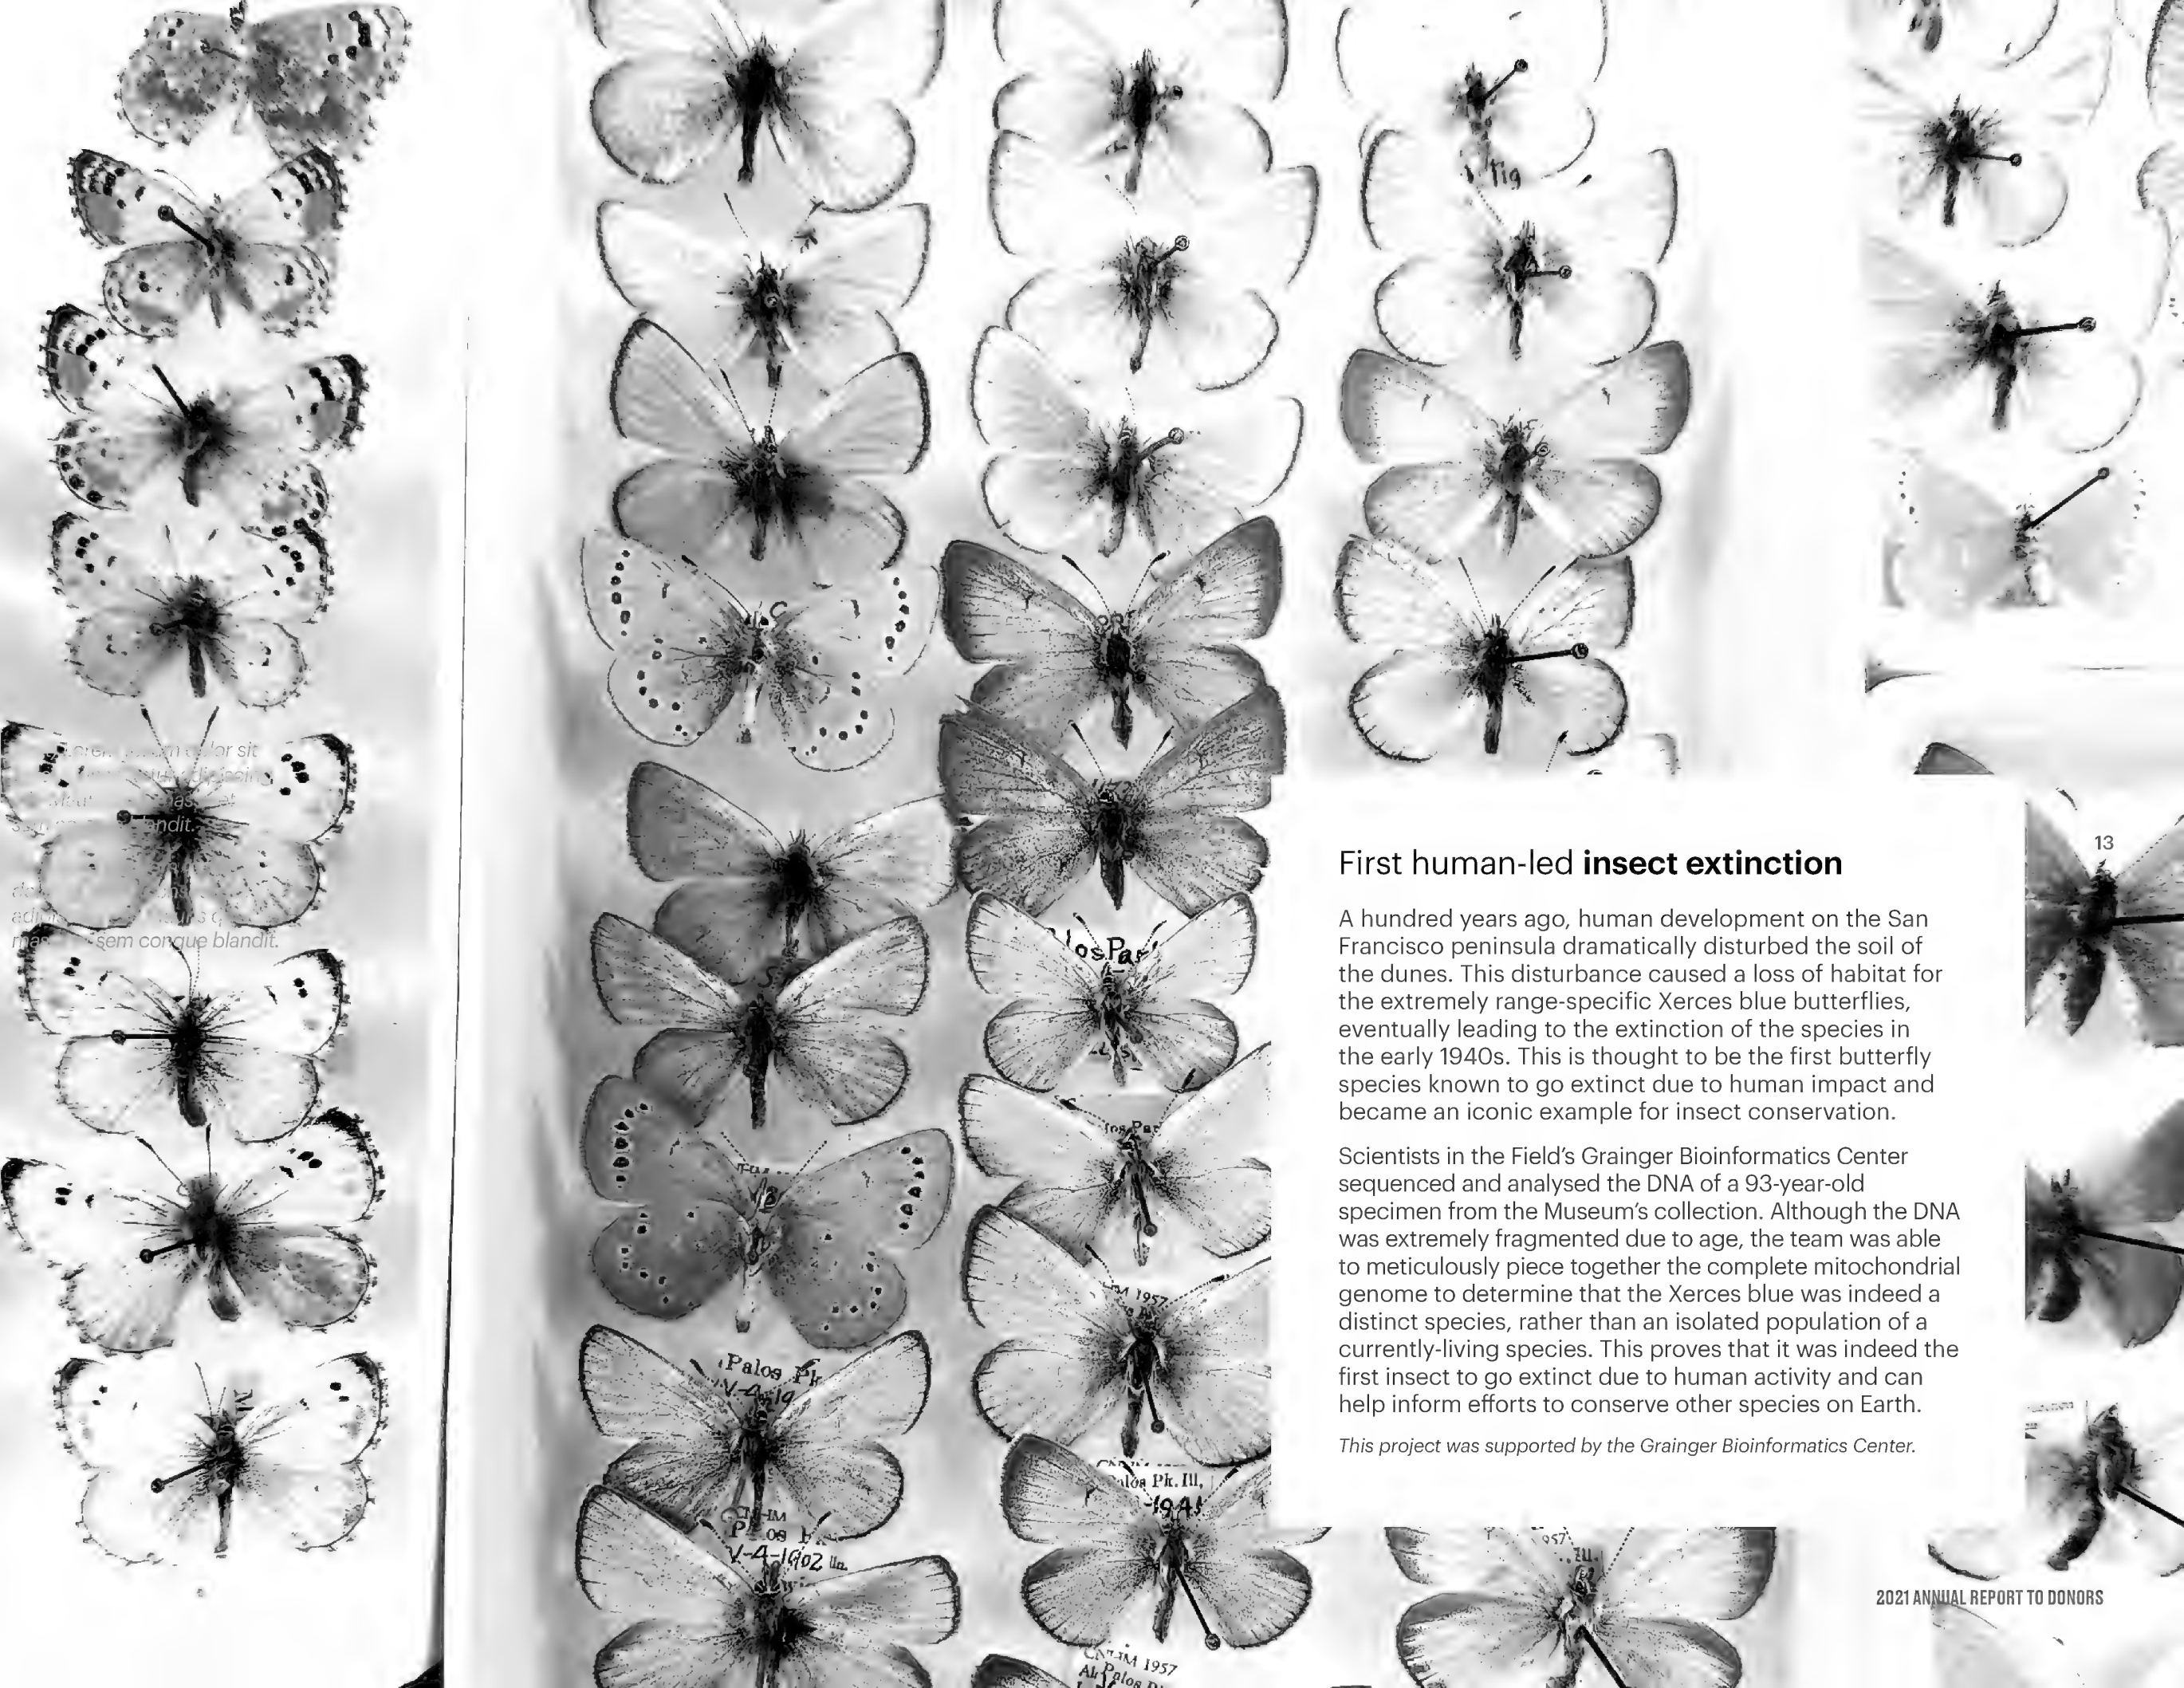

In June 1991, Mount Pinatubo in the Philippines erupted violently. Eight hundred people lost their lives, the lush tropical forest that had covered the mountain disappeared, and, in the following months, powerful typhoons triggered landslides that devastated farmland.

Twenty years later, as documented in a recent publication in the Philippine Journal of Science, members of the Field Museum's Philippine Mammal Project conducted a thorough survey of the mammals on Mount Pinatubo. Because the mountain was still mostly covered by ash fields, they expected native mammals to be all but gone. But the team learned that native mammals of all sizes were thriving. Most remarkably, a mouse known as Apomys sacobianus, (previously known from a single specimen captured in 1956 on Pinatubo) was the most abundant mammal on the mountain. As a rare species on a tropical island subject to a catastrophe, many scientists thought the mouse was extinct.

First human-led insect extinction

A hundred years ago, human development on the San Francisco peninsula dramatically disturbed the soil of the dunes. This disturbance caused a loss of habitat for the extremely range-specific Xerces blue butterflies, eventually leading to the extinction of the species in the early 1940s. This is thought to be the first butterfly species known to go extinct due to human impact and became an iconic example for insect conservation.

Scientists in the Field's Grainger Bioinformatics Center sequenced and analysed the DNA of a 93-year-old specimen from the Museum's collection. Although the DNA was extremely fragmented due to age, the team was able to meticulously piece together the complete mitochondrial genome to determine that the Xerces blue was indeed a distinct species, rather than an isolated population of a currently-living species. This proves that it was indeed the first insect to go extinct due to human activity and can help inform efforts to conserve other species on Earth.

Wild Color

Visitors to Wild Color were plunged into the vibrancy of nature. Throughout the world's ecosystems, color is used to signal, warn, confuse, and more. And while minerals and gems don't use color as organisms do, they produce some of the most splendid and concentrated colors in nature.

Visitors took a trip through the rainbow and experienced some of the finest objects from the Museum's collections. They learned how pigment in food gives some animals their color and how some critters and plants use light-reflecting nanostructures to appear blue when they don't actually contain any blue pigment at all.

Wild Color was created by the Field Museum.

Community-centered conservation at Beaubien Woods

Many threads of the Keller Science Action Center's work came together this year at Beaubien Woods Forest Preserve and neighboring Altgeld Gardens on Chicago's far South Side. With partner TCA Health Clinic and other local groups, the Keller Center organized a series of outdoor nature-based healing sessions and an online toolkit called Outdoor Rx. This effort expanded mixed kitchen and native pollinator gardens at dozens of multigenerational households in Altgeld Gardens, providing fresh, healthy produce for families.

In addition, youth in the Chicago Green Ambassadors internship surveyed local residents about what they want to see in a new nature-and-heritage-inspired gathering space in Beaubien Woods, building on the model developed with the Chicago Park District in the Burnham Wildlife Corridor. In the fall, the Keller Center hosted community stewardship days to collect native seeds and remove invasive species, restoring areas of Beaubien Woods most accessible to local residents.

Summer of Science

Field Museum educators were ecstatic to offer its Field Explorers summer camps in-person again. Field Explorers fosters a love of science and exploration in children from kindergarten through 8th grade. Campers had the opportunity to chat with Field researchers and museum professionals about the work that goes on behind the scenes, and see rarely seen items from the collections. Special tours, guided activities, and outdoor games, supported their natural curiosity about the world around them through one-of-a-kind experiences you can only have at the Field Museum.

Teens experience STEM at the Field

During the summer of 2021, the Field Museum offered a new Digital Learning Program. Thirteen high school students from all around Chicagoland had the unique opportunity to participate in research using some of the newest technological tools. In addition to five weeks of research experience, the students honed their skills in digital media creation, science communications, and computational thinking through creative projects and training.

The Digital Learning Program gave students a catalyst to jump-start their curiosity, linking them to new passions, guiding them on different STEM career paths they could pursue, and providing resources to support them as they contemplate careers in STEM.

The Machine Inside: Biomechanics

Living things are constantly under attack from water, wind, and gravity. Fortunately, life has responded with an arsenal of evolved structures to defend against the environment.

The Machine Inside: Biomechanics opened at the Field Museum on September 3, 2021. Visitors learned about how living things use pipes, pressure, and pumps to move nutrients to every part of the body. They learned about the grip strength of an ape and animals with the greatest bite forces, and also explored an immersive theater experience showing natural innovations from the giant ears of desert foxes to the anti-freeze blood of Antarctic fish.

Pokagon Potawatomi Black Ash Baskets: Our Storytellers

The Field Museum is setting an important example of how Native peoples and museums can collaborate on exhibitions about Indigenous cultures. In April, the Field Museum opened Pokagon Potawatomi Black Ash Baskets: Our Storytellers. The exhibition celebrated the Pokagon Potawatomi people, history, and stories woven into the black ash baskets.

Holistic land plans support intergenerational stewardship

Over the past 10 years, residents of rural Pembroke Township, Illinois have shown that private lands have an important role to play in a conservation mosaic that supports community well-being. In 2021, the Keller Science Action Center collaborated with five local landowners to create Holistic Land Plans for their properties and completed their first plan with longtime partner Johari-Cole Kweli. The document provides a snapshot of her 40-acre property's history, neighbors, key species and features, and conservation challenges. Field Museum ecologists provided guidance, such as which portions of the land to manage as savanna and which to manage as woodland, to support the Cole-Kweli family's long-term vision for the land: a balance of organic agricultural production and wildlife conservation. Over the long term, buttressed by the right resources and technical support, these plans will help promote resilient, equitable conservation in Pembroke.

Becoming Jane: The Evolution of Jane Goodall

Visitors to Becoming Jane: The Evolution of Dr. Jane Goodall were invited to take a journey through the life of Dr. Goodall from childhood to world-renowned scientist. The award-winning exhibition featured stunning photography provided by National Geographic and the Jane Goodall Institute. Also on display were childhood mementos, field journals, and equipment. Today, Dr. Goodall spends her time as a conservationist and activist, spreading a message of hope that, together, we can protect the natural world.

Field Museum helps Guyana set national biodiversity priorities

In South America, Guyana is known as “the land of many waters,” and its rivers and wetlands host an amazing diversity of life, but looming development projects threaten that diversity. The Keller Science Action Center has brought together the most comprehensive understanding of the country's biodiversity to date. In 2021, Keller Center scientists presented these results to Guyana's national Environmental Protection Agency and other government leaders. The information is helping to set national conservation and sustainable development priorities, protecting Guyana's forests, waterways, and the people who depend on them.

Development projects in Guyana pose threats to the country's incredible biodiversity, but significant opportunities remain for durable, community-centered conservation.

Celebrating Culture at the Field

Volunteer staff committees helped the Field Museum honor cultural heritage months and feature diverse voices. Among the celebrations, the Field offered robust programs for Black History Month, Women's History Month, Pride Month, Latinx Heritage Month, and Native American Heritage Month. Through a mix of online and in-person events, digital storytelling, and more, the Museum amplified marginalized voices and honored many of the cultures represented in its vast collections. By flying the Juneteenth flag, opening November with an inter-tribal song performed in the Rice Native Gardens, sharing our conservation work in the Andes-Amazon in an all-Spanish episode of "Meet a Museum Insider," and much more, we remind our community that the Field is for everyone.

Meet a Museum Insider

Beginning in 2020, as part of its virtual offerings during the COVID-19 Pandemic, the Field Museum launched a new online program featuring staff from all across the Museum. The Learning Center and Social Media teams continued this collaboration throughout 2021. Forty-four different Museum Insiders shared their expertise with the public on Facebook through 30-minute live sessions. These episodes took different formats—some were show-and-tells from Museum labs, others were an informal chat from home—but all were a chance for the Field's online audience to hear directly from and ask questions of diverse staff members. Meet a Museum Insider sessions revealed the breadth of knowledge and depth of expertise held by Field Museum staff, highlighting both popular and lesser-known museum careers. Together these episodes were watched for 62,405 total minutes and had 15,589 post engagements.

Centennial Anniversary

This year we celebrated the 100th anniversary of the opening of the Field Museum's iconic lakefront home. For a century, this grand structure has welcomed nearly 137 million visitors, supported the research of generations of scientists, and housed an irreplaceable collection of objects and specimens that today numbers more than 40 million!

The generous support of donors—like you sustains this excellence and ensures that the Field will continue to connect all of us to the natural world and the human story.

Because Earth Campaign

On December 31, 2021 the Field Museum concluded its Because Earth campaign, raising $316.2 million for the Museum's future. Through the generous support of our extended family of donors, the Museum renovated Stanley Field Hall, opened several new areas and exhibitions like the Rice Native Gardens and the Native Truths: Our Voices, Our Stories, and formed four centers of excellence.

70th Annual Members' Nights

The Field Museum hosted its annual Members' Nights on May 19–21. This popular event was held virtually for the second year in a row. Over the course of three days, 946 member households joined the virtual celebration which featured 30 Field scholars showcasing objects from the collections not normally on display and collections storage areas that aren't accessible during in-person Members' Nights.

Field Museum presents first-ever joint Parker/Gentry Award

The Museum presented the 26th Parker/Gentry Award to the Fort Belknap Indian Community and American Prairie Reserve (now American Prairie) for their efforts restoring the imperiled Northern Great Plains. From their lands in northern Montana, the Fort Belknap Indian Community of the Nakoda (Assiniboiné) and Aaniiih (Gros Ventre) Nations is a leader in returning prairie wildlife to the region. American Prairie is creating a multi-million-acre protected corridor in Montana that will be the largest of its kind in the contiguous United States. During the ceremony, awardees and guest speakers transported those in attendance to Big Sky Country with stunning imagery and poignant stories. The impact tribal members have had on the worldview of American Prairie and other conservation partners in the region was evident. Another highlight of this year's celebration was a congratulatory letter from US Secretary of the Interior Deb Haaland, the first Native American to serve as a cabinet secretary.

Nelson Rowley III's mollusk collection

On April 1, 2021, approximately 100 plastic bins were delivered to the Field Museum's Invertebrates Collections. This was, however, no April Fools' Day joke. The bins contained a first-rate collection of mollusk shells. It was donated by the collector, Nelson Rowley III, who had been a shell aficionado for decades. As he was preparing to relocate from Chicago to Arizona, he decided that it was the right time to gift the collection to the Field Museum. In the past, Nelson has supported the museum's Invertebrates Collections and, most recently, with his collection of mollusk-related books.

The collection contains an estimated 2,500 specimens representing 1,500 species. The majority of the shells are of marine origin, but there are also several freshwater and terrestrial species.

Grandson of the Field's first paleontologist reconnects with the Field Museum

On Saturday, July 24, Bill Simpson, McCarter Collections Manager, hosted Ralph Elmer Riggs, grandson of Elmer Samuel Riggs, the Field's first paleontologist and founder of our vertebrate paleontology collections.

Elmer Riggs was hired in 1898 and retired in 1942. His early dinosaur work included excavating the new world's largest dinosaur in 1900, which he named Brachiosaurus altithorax, and a mountable Apatosaurus in 1901, both of which came from western Colorado and are on display today at the Field.

Ralph Riggs visited with his wife, Dana Temple, and friends. Simpson took them through Vertebrate Paleontology Oversize in the Collections Resource Center, where they saw the holotype of Brachiosaurus, and other large sauropods, including the giant femur from the Riggs Apatosaurus. Ralph and party were amazed at the variety of fossils his grandfather collected for our Museum.

New beetles donation

On April 20th, the Field Museum received a gift of 1,200 Staphylinid beetles from long time collaborator Mark Evans. The specimens were mostly collected in Langlade Co, WI, and Madison Co., NY, and curators emeriti Al Newton and Margaret Thayer are contributing to having them identified to species. On June 18th, while participating on the Milwaukee Public Museum's BioBlitz at the Wehr Nature Center along with Collections Manager Maureen Turcatel and Collections Assistant Jim Louderman, Mr Evans made a second gift of 265 pinned specimens of horse flies and deer flies. His collecting efforts in Wisconsin continued throughout the Summer, and he plans to add more specimens to the Field's collections.

Annual Women's Board Gala

On October 16, 2021, the Field Museum hosted its second virtual gala, which raised nearly $2.2M in essential support for museum operations. Led by Women's Board President Sandy Deromedi with Co-Chairs Beth Glass and Laura Podjasek, the event was the highest-netting gala in Field Museum history.

The program featured the presentation of the Marshall Field V Award for Distinguished Leadership to Past Board Chair John A. Canning, Jr. For 25 years, Mr. Canning has demonstrated an outstanding commitment to the Museum's mission. He and his wife Rita funded the Early Education Science Partnership, a groundbreaking collaboration between the Field Museum and Big Shoulders Fund to improve preschool science education. The Cannings were also among the first to invest in the Museum's Because Earth Campaign.

The gala included two curator talks, guest appearances by young people who have benefitted from the Museum's internship and volunteer opportunities, and a tour of Stanley Field Hall in honor of the building's Centennial. More than 120 donors and 300 households participated in the gala celebration of our historic building!

Field Associates bring back in-person events

As the Field Museum's first major in-person gathering since the onset of the pandemic, the Field Associates' annual fundraiser featured the Field's new exhibition Wild Color. In the theme of Wild Color, guests were invited to participate in a hands-on graffiti art workshop and enjoy the night bathed in light, dance to a live band, mingle with Field Museum scientists, and try bites provided by some of Chicago's best BIPOC-owned restaurants. The Field Associates raised nearly $100,000 through this event, anchored by both Trustee support and more than $25,000 in new sponsorships secured through Field Associates' networks.

GIVING DAYCelebrating 100 years
in our lakefront home

Giving Day 2021

Giving Day 2021 celebrated 100 years in our lakefront home by showcasing initiatives that inspire, engage, and encourage scientists of all ages to take journeys of discovery at the Museum. This Giving Day, 764 supporters raised more than $285,000. In addition, 113 Ambassadors grew the Field Museum's community to further our mission. 120 staff and volunteer supporters gave more than $45,000.

As part of the Giving Day celebrations, the Field Museum's own Noé de la Sancha presented on the Field's ongoing work in important South American habitats. Showing the impact that human-caused deforestation is having on biodiversity and ways that we can mitigate the negative impact on mammals.

The Field Museum is grateful to YOU—our members and donors. Your gifts support hundreds of scientific projects that document and safeguard the biodiversity of Earth and inspire the next generation of scientists.

IN MEMORIAM

Jean Reddy Armour

Mrs. Armour's relationship with the Field began in 1961, when she joined the Museum as a Founders' Council member. She was elected to the Board of Trustees in 1977, and later as a Life Trustee, a role she served until her death. She was a cherished member of the Women's Board, and served as its President from 1982 to 1984. She was the founding chair of the Friends of the Field Museum Library and worked as a volunteer in both the Anthropology and Birds divisions. In addition to being an avid bird watcher and enthusiast, Jean was a skilled bird skinner and dresser. The Field Museum is proud to hold several of her specimens in its Birds collection.

Timuel D. Black

Mr. Timuel D. Black passed away in October 2021 at the age of 102. He was beloved for his vibrant personality as a Chicago storyteller, civil rights leader, historian, educator, veteran, author, humanitarian, mentor, and friend to so many—including staff at the Field Museum. His wife, Mrs. Zenobia Johnson-Black said it best at his memorial, "Tim loved people. He loved justice. He loved teaching and he loved me. Tim loved himself and consequently he could show love to others. He grew up secure in the knowledge that he was loved and that his life mattered."

Roger O. Brown

Roger O. Brown was an important and active member of the Chicago financial and philanthropic communities. With his wife Barbara,

Mr. Brown was a passionate supporter of many Chicago civic organizations and universities. For more than 60 years, Mr. Brown and his late wife Barbara Brown were active members of the Chairman's Circle, Founders' Council, and Women's Board, and generously funded Field Museum endowments supporting a postdoctoral fellowship, and mammal, bird, and evolutionary biology research.

Jim Conrad

Jim Conrad, a longtime friend of the Field Museum along with his wife Carol, believed in supporting the mission of the institution and inspiring the next generation of scientists as a proud supporter of Giving Day. Jim generously served his community as a dedicated educator for more than 35 years and in his position as a Bolingbrook Park Commissioner.

Richard Duchossois

A lifelong Chicagoan, Richard Duchossois was a prominent businessman and World War II veteran whose name is synonymous with the storied Arlington Park racetrack. Through the Duchossois Family Foundation, he generously supported medical and scientific advancements, along with the Field Museum and other major Chicago cultural institutions.

Suzanne S. Garvin

Suzanne S. Garvin was a member of the Women's Board since 1975 and a passionate volunteer for youth programs at the Field Museum, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, the Cub Scouts, and elementary school libraries. Along with her late spouse, John S. Garvin, Mrs. Garvin was a generous Field supporter for more than 45 years.

Pamela Kelley Hull

Pam Hull was a friend of the Field for 60 years serving as a Life Trustee and Charter Member of the Museum's Women's Board. She was the maternal grandchild of Stanley Field and paternal grandchild of William V. Kelley, whose expeditions acquired remarkable specimens for the Museum. Mrs. Hull was a generous donor and supported the restoration and exhibition of the Malvina Hoffman sculptures.

Kenneth Peter Kaye

Kenneth Peter Kaye, a cherished member of the Field Museum Founders' Council donor community for over 20 years, died in his home on May 26, 2021 at the age of 75. Among many Field Museum programs, the Parker Gentry Award for Conservation Science was of great importance to Ken. He is survived by his wife Janice Kaye, his four children and five grandchildren. In addition to Kenneth's love and support for the Field Museum, he was a leader in the field of family business dynamics, an avid traveler, published many books, and was dedicated to supporting his community through the Howard Area Community Center, North Lawndale Employment Network and Evanston Public Library.

William J. Kirby

Long time member of the Founders' Council and Science Action Committee, "Jay" Kirby passed away on June 30, 2021. He and his wife, Catherine, cared deeply about the wide-ranging outreach of the Field, and were especially committed to community conservation efforts in Chicago. We celebrate the terrific impact Jay has made on our institution.

Robert E. Kling

The Field Museum fondly remembers Robert "Bob" E. Kling, a lifelong fan of the institution. Bob's affinity for the Field Museum stemmed from his love of learning and his commitment to conservation. He had generously named the Field Museum as a beneficiary of his Trust, and last year the Museum received a remarkable $600,000 gift from his estate. We are grateful to be a part of Bob's inspiring legacy.

Frederick A. Krehbiel

A supporter of the Field Museum for decades, Fred Krehbiel was an admired civic leader and former CEO and co-chairman of electronics giant MOLEX. He was a staunch advocate of Chicago's non-profit community, serving on philanthropic boards across the Chicagoland region. Fred will be remembered for his caring and generous spirit.

Lorin I. Nevling, PhD

Lorin "Larry" I. Nevling, Jr., former Curator of Botany and Director at the Field, passed away on January 17, 2022, at age 91. Larry received his BS in Biology from St. Mary's College in Winona, Minnesota, followed by service in the 44th Infantry Division, US Army. He received his PhD in Botany from Washington University in St. Louis in 1959, and joined Harvard University. In 1973 he was hired at the Field as Curator and Chair of Botany, and was eventually appointed Assistant Director for Science and Education. In 1980, he became Director of the Museum until he left for a new role as Chief of the Illinois Natural History Survey in Champaign in 1987.

Sally Searle

The Field Museum community mourns the loss of Sally Burnett Searle, who passed away in May 2021. An avid sportswoman with a passion for the outdoors, Sally was an active volunteer and benefactor of many conservation-oriented organizations, including the Field. She and her late husband, Bill, a Trustee of the Museum, supported the Field for more than fifty years, and were instrumental in the 2011 gift to update the Searle Family Lounge. We are grateful for Sally's friendship, generosity, and positive spirit, and for the enduring philanthropy of the Searle Family over more than seven decades.

Laura Fairbank Sudler

Field Museum benefactor, Laura Fairbank Sudler, passed away on August 18, 2021. Mrs. Sudler was an accomplished collector and her donation of Chinese textiles and accessories made a meaningful impact on the Field's collections. She and her husband, Louis, were dedicated supporters of many Chicago institutions, including the Peggy Notebaert Nature Museum and the Art Institute of Chicago. She was a traveler who led countless expert journeys of discovery for her family and friends.

Elizabeth Jane Tyner

Elizabeth Jane Tyner passed away on October 11, 2021 in Sydney, Australia. Mrs. Tyner volunteered at the Field Museum for 18 years, bringing exhibitions to life for thousands of visitors. Jane had a passion for New Zealand anthropology and her favorite place at the Field was the Maori House. Jane is missed by the many docents and Museum staff who worked with her.

Celebrating Careers in Scientific Excellence

For more than 125 years, the Field Museum has supported the work of generations of scientists. Each used their expertise and unique experiences to further our understanding of nature and culture. The Field Museum celebrates the following curators who retired in 2020-2022 and joined the Field's distinguished network of emeriti.

Alaka Wali, PhD

*Curator of North American
Anthropology,
1995–2022*

Alaka was the Museum's first urban-focused anthropologist. Much of her early research focused on the relationship between art and social resilience. As Director of the Center for Cultural Understanding and Change (1995–2010), she pioneered the development of museum-based participatory social science action research and community engagement, and she continues to work with the Keller Science Action Center on conservation programs that engage communities in Chicagoland and the Amazon. For the past four years, Alaka has been instrumental in the development of our newly renovated Native North American Hall, Native Truths: Our Voices, Our Stories. She will remain active in these efforts after retiring, as well as preparing papers and field notes for the Museum's archives, traveling to Peru to reconnect with colleagues there, and visiting with family in New York and California!

Bruce Patterson, PhD

*MacArthur Curator of Mammals,
1987–2022*

Bruce sums up his broad and deep research career in mammal evolution as “rats, bats, and cats.” Born in Panama, he's always been interested in the mammals of South America and over time developed an interest in the coevolution of their parasites. In the 1990s, he began work on the ecology of lions in Africa's Tsavo region (and researching our own man-eaters). He subsequently began work on the Bats of Kenya with African and U.S. colleagues and students. Through all this, Bruce has collaborated with dozens of international colleagues and mentored hundreds of early-career scientists. Research is a curator's first love, and we're pretty sure Bruce will be back at it the day after he retires, but he might find some time for family, gardening and fishing.

Scott Lidgard, PhD

*Curator of Fossil Invertebrates,
1984–2020*

Scott's work combines paleontology and life sciences. He has spent much of his career studying bryozoans (“spineless scum-sucking bottom dwellers,” in his words) the only phylum of animals in which all species are colonies composed of genetically identical zooids. He is known for his studies of large-scale evolutionary patterns: on local and global ‘competition’ between marine invertebrate groups over millions of years, and notably in a series of classic papers co-authored with Field Museum Trustee Peter Crane, FRS, in Science, Nature, and Paleobiology, that described how flowering plants took over the land during the Cretaceous. Scott continues to pursue research on the concepts of biological individuality and living fossils, but retirement has freed up a little more time to perfect his culinary skills and enjoy his grandkids.

Olivier Rieppel, PhD

Rowe Family Curator of Evolutionary
Biology, 1990–2022

Most of our Curators have a research niche, but Olivier has several. He is a renowned expert on the Triassic marine reptiles known as sauropterygians, as well as the origin of snakes. In the 2000s, collaborating with Chinese colleagues, he expanded his marine reptile work to include thalattosaurs and protorosaurs, and in 2017 he published a book on the origin of turtles. All along, he was publishing on the philosophy of biology, including Karl Popper's significance, the metaphysics of evolving entities, and evolutionary theory and creationism. Oliver shows no signs of letting up just because he is "retiring," but during his occasional breaks we can picture him enjoying a nice bottle of Clos des Papes Châteauneuf-du-Pape, watching Seinfeld re-runs, or fishing in a local pond.

(On the back cover) Many insects, like this leaf insect (Phyllium siccifolium), have adapted a clever form of camouflage called leaf mimicry. Using green and sometimes brown coloration, leaf insects use this adaptation to hide from hungry predators.
